CUMBERLAND COMPANY

Sued for $600 for Alleged Personal Injuries.

Rev. Lawson C. Major, col., has filed suit against the Cumberland Telephone and Telegraph Co. for $500 damages. Rev. Major is pastor of New Asia Baptist church, and he alleges in his petition that on June 7 last, he was returning from church and while driving along the New Asia public road at a point near the intersection of this road with the Hopkinsville and Garrettsburg road, he suddenly came in contact with a line of wire which was under control of the defendant and which was negligently and carelessly permitted to fall or hang over and across the said New Asia road and that the wire struck him across the nose, dragged or knocked him from his buggy to the hard ground, thereby bruising his nose, hurting his spine and injuring him internally.

He further alleges that his injuries were due to the carelessness and negligence of defendant.

FEAR MOB LAW

When Negroes Are Brought Back to Elkton for Trial.

Elkton, Ky., July 24.--Deputy Sheriffs Lindsey and Chestnut left for Louisville to bring here for trial, on Monday, Tom Coleman and Ross Ligon, the negroes charged with assaulting Ralph Carden. The negroes, after their arrest here, were taken to Bowling Green to escape a mob and were later taken to Louisville, when it was rumored that the mob would go to Bowling Green to get the men. The authorities here are somewhat apprehensive, and fear that the prisoners may be taken away from them when brought back for trial, though Mr. Carden, who was taken to Hopkinsville for treatment, is recovering.

OUTING AT CAVE FOR BALDHEADS

Club Takes an Automobile Excursion to the Country.

GOOD TIME FOR ALL.

Some Happy After Dinner Speeches and Gems of Poetry.

A pleasant surprise was in store for the Baldheaded Club when it met in called session yesterday. Just why the meeting should have been called in the daytime was made clear when President Champlin announced that a trip to the country was the order of the day.

Automobiles were soon puffing into place, under the direction of Col. Buck Leavell and Lem McKee, and as soon as the vehicles could be loaded, the train of horseless carriages sped away over the pike to a romantic spot in a beautiful grove, "Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife."

The site was an ideal one. Underneath an overhanging bluff was a wide and capacious cavern, fifty feet in width and almost as deep. On one side the cavern narrowed into a passage way that extended for perhaps a mile back under the hill. A stream of water crossed this cave, dropped to a lower level and emerged just outside the large entrance as a spring of delightfully cool water. Beyond the spring in front of the cave stretched a pretty little valley, through which the spring branch wound its way and disappeared in the forest. All around were the primeval forest trees, under whose overhanging boughs the Red men pitched their tepees more than a hundred years ago.

Here in this natural bungalow the Club was to hold its meeting and initiate half a dozen new members and drive dull care away and devote the day wholly to pleasure.

President Champlin was in his glory. A beaming smile irradiated his capacious features, a resplendent sunflower adorned the lapel of his coat and the glad hand was extended to every one.

Col. Buck Leavell was a committee of one to look after the barbecued meats that had been roasting for several hours over a fire on the hillside.

Col. Ed Peyton presided at a tin tub full of lemonade such as he alone can make.

Col. Bill Howell had come in from Caledonia and was soon back in the dark recess of the inner cave, rehearsing by the light of a tallow candle, one of his celebrated impromptu speeches to be delivered extemporaneously after dinner.

Col. Ward Claggett, who had not attended for a long time, was there with his polished dome of thought a close second to Col. Joe Twyman's in the absence of hair.

Col. Chess Pyle was prancing around like a two-year-old colt in a field of April clover.

It would not be fair to tell all that was done while the appetites were being whetted, but as high noon approached the odor of roast meat smote the air and soon there was something doing.

After dinner there were many happy speeches and some bran new things were gotten off, including Col. Bill Howell's poem on the Democratic candidates, which was as follows to-wit and appears herewith:

Don't think I'm wicked
But I don't care a durn
For any old ticket
But Bryan and Kern.

Col. Howell received so much applause that Col. Ike Hart ventured the opinion that Barnyard Kuppling couldn't beat it, and wound up by offering to give $4.99 to any man who could compose and recite a poem half as good.

Col. Walter Southall said he could do it with both hands tied behind him and the cavern walls resounded

I mean no offense
But my boy Herman
Has got more sense
Than Taft and Sherman.

Col. Lem McKee said the trouble about Col. Southall's poem was that it seemed to deal in taffy for Herman and not for Taft.

Col. Ed Peyton then propelled the following gem full upon the auricular nerves of the enraptured auditors:

Look out for the coming landslide,
And mind which way you turn,
It's moving at a 2:40 gait,
Straight for Bryan and Kern.

President Champlin ruled Col. Peyton's poem out of order, because it was impossible to tell whether he meant that Bryan and Kern were going to be caught up on the landslide or run over by it.

Col. Peyton said the ambiguity of the effort was its chief merit. The poem was composed under a bipartisan administration.

At this point several Colonels were on their feet claiming recognition, to recite poems, but President Champlin said the contest had developed into an unprecedented exhibition of cruelty to animals and after fining Col. Hart $10 for starting the trouble, he declared the meeting adjourned. Col. Hart survived the fine and is doing as well as could be expected.
